These are the premier educational institutions catering to the development of the nation's managerial manpower. Various placement agencies both from private as well as public sector visit these institutes every year to select the candidates from amongst the MM students to meet their requirements. IIMs do not encourage their students to take up any particular type of work. The students are free to take up a job of their choice. The alumni of the IIMs have distinguished themselves in all sectors, not just with MNCs. To meet the demand, the Government has suggested the IIMs to create more opportunities for students in the country by increasing intake capacity, creation of additional infrastructure and introduction of new courses. Over the years the IIMs have developed their own brand image and there is no question of changing the goals, objectives and orientation of these Institutes.
